2. It is my understanding that [redacted] through the appropriate channels will explore the possibility of using the facilities of the Economic Intelligence Committee for accomplishing the proposed project. This subject is basically twofold in that it requires both research and analysis. Presumably the EIC can prepare the chronological data. After this has been done, there remains the question of whom will analyze it. It is possible that this analysis can be done by an external group.

3. Such an external group might call upon Government sources via the EIC on a continuing basis and regularly report its findings to OPC.
